

City Council Meets with County Planning Board Chair E. Hewlett

by Thomas X. White

At a July 21 Greenbelt City Council stakeholder session with Elizabeth M. Hewlett, chair of the County Planning Board, Hewlett concluded the meeting on an upbeat note. “Our time is coming,” she said regarding her optimistic vision of Prince George’s County’s future. Planning Director Fern Piret was also to attend, but cancelled due to illness. All councilmembers were present.

The worksession agenda included a number of issues of interest to Greenbelt as well as the top issues on the Planning Board’s agenda. Topics included the status of the recently approved Greenbelt Metro Area Sector Plan and Prince George’s Plan 2035, recently adopted by the Prince George’s County District Council. Others were the Formula 2040 Plan for County Parks and Recreation and the most recent initiative, a comprehensive rewrite of the county’s zoning ordinance and subdivision regulations.

Council also included several items of information where the city and the county have a shared interest. These include the potential location of a new Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) consolidated headquarters at the Greenbelt Metro site (see Mayor Emmett Jordan’s Metro development article in the July 31 issue); the status of the Purple Line street car, to run from New Carrollton to Bethesda, pedestrian and bicycle plans and an update on Greenbelt’s preliminary efforts to develop a city strategy for economic development.

Although Hewlett indicated that the state was moving ahead with the Purple Line, she noted that there were huge cost and financing issues for the Prince George’s share of the proposed project.

Development

Not surprisingly, the focus of council’s discussion with Hewlett was related mainly to economic development. She described the Plan 2035 as an opportunity to look at new county options for development with a focus on Metro centers and continued development of the county’s commercial base, a departure from the image of Prince George’s County as a bedroom community.

There is more interest in Metro development, in which Prince George’s County has lagged in comparison to other metropolitan jurisdictions. More information was contained in a handout that is available at www.planpgc2035.com.

Complementing the planning and development focus was Hewlett’s description of a new initiative, Formula 2040, which is a long-range master plan for the county’s parks, recreation and open space programs. She noted that these areas have not been looked at comprehensively since the previous plan was adopted in 1982.

The focus will be directed at healthful recreation activities and facilities, including pedestrian and bicycle facilities. Hewlett noted the county’s concerns for citizens’ overall health, including obesity.

Jordan posed the question, “Where is the Prince George’s downtown/uptown?” Hewlett admitted there probably is no specific downtown, but rather a focus on metro/regional centers and corridors of development. Councilmember Judith Davis wondered about the county’s coordination with the Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments (COG) regarding overall planning and coordination. Other councilmembers also expressed concern that the focus on development not run counter to environmental concerns and the preservation of farms and open space.

Council also questioned whether adequate attention was being given to recreational amenities for newly developed communities, and Councilmember Rodney Roberts hoped the county plans emulate the Greenbelt experience in assuring adequate recreational facilities for newer communities.

Zoning Rewrite

A good part of the meeting was devoted to the county’s recent undertaking of a projected three-year effort to make comprehensive amendments to the Prince George’s County Zoning Ordinance and Subdivision Regulations. The county has created a task force made up of a cross section of citizens and interests to address a growing perception that current ordinances and regulations have become inflexible, increasingly resulting in conflicts.

Hewlett sees the objectives as resolving conflicting issues, adapting to more up-to-date modern uses and infrastructure and, where possible, consolidating the zoning regulatory program.

The program as highlighted on the Planning Board’s website is described as:

- Evaluating the effectiveness of current regulations and suggesting changes needed to implement the General Plan’s policy recommendations for development centers and the developed, developing and rural tiers.
- Analyzing the development review process and recommending streamlined measures to provide efficiency, transparency and certainty in the decision making process to ensure high quality development.
- Examining the form, function and layout of the zoning ordinance and subdivision regulations, recommending revisions and producing a user friendly format.

Hewlett also provided a four-page handout relating to the zoning rewrite. The project is being managed by Leslye Howerton and information is available at <http://zoningpgc.pgplanning.com/>.

Other Issues

Councilmember Konrad Herling raised an issue relating to installation of convenient recharging stations for all-electric vehicles and whether there are any development or zoning issues associated with their placement. Hewlett offered to check on that issue. Herling also queried the potential use of synchronization of traffic control signals by public buses.

In response to a question from Councilmember Leta Mach, Hewlett agreed that the College Park and Greenbelt area should meet the definition of a technology zone.

Closing on a positive note, Hewlett told council she is optimistic regarding Prince George’s County’s future.

Sage Asks Focus Groups For Insight into Needs

by Thomas X. White

Greenbelt citizens, businesses and organizations should be aware of recent initiatives underway to develop a strategic focus for improving the economic climate in Greenbelt. After several years of discussion and urging, especially by Councilmember Konrad Herling and now Mayor Emmett Jordan, the city has engaged the Sage Policy Group of Baltimore to develop a tailored economic development strategy for Greenbelt.

The proposed study would address the following questions:

- What is the economic base of the City of Greenbelt?
- What opportunities exist for expansion of the economic base (including the FBI potential, but other opportunities as well)?
- What coordinated efforts are required to take advantage of identified opportunities?
- How can the city most effectively deploy its financial resources to target those opportunities most consistent with higher incomes, greater investment, diversification and quality of life/place?

The Sage Group has scheduled several focus group sessions with interested businesses, organizations and community leaders during the week of August 4, by invitation only. City staff members are not involved in these sessions. Another focus session is scheduled for the public on Tuesday, August 12 in the council chamber beginning at 7 p.m.

Online Public Survey

In addition, for citizens unable to attend the public focus session, a brief survey is available online that asks six questions dealing with their views on Greenbelt and its economic climate and challenges. That survey can be accessed at <https://www.surveymonkey.com/s/GreenbeltEconDev>.

The survey can also be accessed on the city website at www.greenbeltmd.gov.

Greenbelt Lions Undertake A Year Full of Good Deeds

by Jordan Choper

The Greenbelt Lions Club has just completed another year of bringing help to Greenbelt and the surrounding community. Our installation of officers and Charter Night, held at the Bowie Old Town Grille on June 10, rounded out the 2013-2014 fiscal year.

Lions Community Outreach Foundation, which handles the equipment that the Greenbelt and other Lions Clubs use to give free screenings for vision, glaucoma, hearing and amblyopia (lazy eye), has just acquired a tow truck and a newly-equipped trailer that houses the machines necessary to perform these screenings. It is more portable than the Lions bus and, unlike the bus, does not require a commercial driver’s license to operate.

The monies we raise support screening events and also pay for exams and glasses for adults and children who otherwise could not afford them. We also support the Wilmer Eye Clinic at The Johns Hopkins University Hospital in Baltimore and the Lions Vision Research Foundation attached to the Wilmer Eye Clinic. Both provide valuable research and practical assistance to those with low vision issues.

To help us with the funding of our projects we are sponsoring a carnival at the rear of Beltway Plaza Mall from August 19 to 23.

The Greenbelt Lions Club performs many community-oriented activities throughout the year. The club may be seen in the weeks before Christmas wrapping packages in the mid-way at Beltway Plaza. During the holiday season, we have a toy drive and provide coats to underprivileged children. We also raise funds at an all-you-can-eat pancake breakfast with Santa held at the American Legion in early December, where children eat free and adults pay a minimum flat fee.

The Greenbelt Lions Club also supports Lions Camp Merrick in Nanjemoy, Md., which provides camping experiences for children with visual challenges, diabetes and other chronic conditions. The camp’s nursing staff helps the participants to manage their symptoms and medications. Children and their families tell us that this is an invaluable experience.

If you would be interested in volunteering to help the Lions with any of their projects, please contact Jordan at 301-474-3766 or Lynda at 301-474-8964.

Letters to the Editor

Incredulous

I just read the July 31 News Review and was incredulous to read of the mayor’s apparent delight over Greenbelt making the short list for the new FBI headquarters. Apparently, the mayor believes this will be a “game changer” for the area. I totally agree. Having spent most of Saturday afternoon trying to get from point ‘a’ to point ‘b’ on Greenbelt Road in what is, increasingly, unending traffic, I can only think that 11,000 more people added to the completely overburdened road system will be exactly what we need to create total gridlock. Is that the mayor’s goal or are we supposed to be so enamored with the mantra of “economic opportunities” that we are blind to the declining quality of life in the area? And just a suggestion, but maybe before the 11,000 FBI employees get here – and definitely before next winter – Mayor Jordan might want Greenbelt to figure out how to get the BW Parkway repaired at the Greenbelt exits – the road is barely drivable and getting worse by the week.

In the same issue, I read that president of the [GHI] board Skolnik praised Pepco for its “excellent job.” I wonder if the Greenbelt Park staff would agree. When I went to their office months ago to ask why so many mature, healthy trees had been felled on what I thought was protected NPS land, the response was that it wasn’t their doing or at their request but that, despite their protests, Pepco had received state approval to do what they did, wherever they chose to do it.

Obviously, it’s much simpler to blame the trees that block access to the lines, rather than actually fixing the problem long-term by putting the lines underground as many responsible cities and power companies have already done.

Corrections

In the report of the city’s stakeholder meeting with Greenbelt Homes, Inc., a change of tense perhaps made Steve Skolnik’s tenure on the city’s Board of Appeals tenuous. Skolnik, while new to the presidency of GHI, continues to serve on the city board as he has for 20 years.

In the July 17 issue of the News Review, Greenbelter Jeff Lemieux was incorrectly identified as the owner of Proteus Bicycles. Laurie Lemieux and Ben Bassett own Proteus. Jeff Lemieux’s affiliations with the shop are occasional volunteer and trophy spouse.

Invasive Plants In the North Woods

I read Willis Witter’s letter concerning invasive plants and trash in the Greenbelt Forest Preserve in the July 10 issue of the Greenbelt News Review. I decided to hike all of the trails in the North Woods Tract of the forest preserve and check it out for myself. I found 10 invasive plant species that I was able to confidently identify. The infestation of these plants is worse at the entrance to trails of the North Woods Tract and tapers off deeper into the woods and with rising elevation. I found the infestation worse at the entrance off Ridge Road than at Northway. The trees looked to be free of invasive vines but the understory was not so lucky.

Here is a list of the invasive plants that I found in order from most abundant to least abundant: Multiflora Rose (Rosa multiflora), Japanese Honeysuckle (Lonicera japonica), English Ivy (Hedera helix), Japanese Stiltgrass (Microstegium vimineum), Japanese Barbery (berberis thunbergii), Winged Burning Bush (Euonymus alatus), Japanese Pachysandra (Pachysandra terminalis), Asiatic Dayflower (Commelina communis), Wineberry (Rubus phoenicolasius), Bush Honeysuckle (Lonicera maackii).

I found other plants that I could not confidently identify that looked like other invasive species and I did not leave the trails, so there are probably more species than the ones I have listed.

The North Woods Tract as a whole is not in bad shape as far as invasive plants are concerned when compared to other urban woodlands in the area, but they are there and in significant enough numbers and densities to warrant action. A comprehensive invasive plant management plan and implementation of the plan is needed sooner rather than later. The infestation appears to be at a manageable state but it won’t stay that way forever. Invasive plants can out-compete native plants for space and resources decreasing biodiversity and are an unfortunate reality in urban woodlands.

Bible School Focus Is Puppeteering

Mowatt Memorial United Methodist Church will offer Vacation Bible School evening sessions for all ages for a week starting August 18 and ending with a show on Friday, August 22. A light supper will be provided at 5:30 p.m. and activities will begin at 6. The theme will be Workshop of Wonders.

The main attraction will be learning puppeteering from Master Puppeteer Erick Lundin. Lundin discovered his knack for puppets when he and Pastor Fay found a whole closet full of puppets and puppet gear at College Park United Methodist Church (CPUMC) in 2007. Together they went to a puppet festival in Pittsburgh sponsored by One Way Street (now Creative Puppet Ministries). They saw puppeteers of all ages portray stories of the Bible, worship and praise. Inspired, they started a new puppet ministry at CPUMC called Little Hands-Big Mouths. The children ranged from 7 to 11 years old. They performed during church services and competed at puppet festivals against adults and were able to hold their own.

In 2009, Little Hands-Big Mouths took third place in the Greenbelt Labor Day parade in the float category with their version of Born in a Barn.

Lundin is also a professional clown and brings his performance and clowning skills, enabling children to bring their puppets to life by stimulating their creativity, and developing public speaking skills, hand-eye coordination, self-confidence and self-esteem.

A small fee will be requested to cover the cost of materials. Please call the church to pre-register and find out more details at 301-474-9410 or email Moore9418@verizon.net.

Obituaries

Annette Brady

Annette Principe Brady of Frederick, Md., died of pancreatic cancer on July 28, 2014, at the age of 89. Annette was born on July 22, 1925, in Washington, D.C. She retired from the National Park Service in 1980. She and her husband William (Bill) Brady were married for 65 years.

Annette and Bill came to Greenbelt in 1959 with their four children and settled in the new Lakewood subdivision. They were active members of St. Hugh's parish and helped with fund-raising for the church building. Annette assisted at the school with monthly luncheons, was a substitute teacher and served in the PTA. She also was active in the Ladies Sodality.

In 1975 the couple moved from Greenbelt, finally settling in Gettysburg, Pa., in 1989. They enjoyed a wonderful life there, took trips and cruises to many places, including their countries of ancestry: Italy for Annette, Ireland for Bill. Annette loved spoiling their grandchildren and attending many graduations, recitals and plays. She loved life and spending time with family and friends.

In addition to her husband, Annette is survived by her children, Thomas (Annette) Brady of Herndon, Va., Kathleen (Wayne) Smith of Greenbelt, James (Martha) Brady of Olney and Anita (Ronald) Bartlinski of Frederick; eight grandchildren: Brady (Wendy) Smith of Laurel; Karla (David) Heinen of Raleigh, N.C.; Sean (Julia) Bartlinski of Frederick, Nicholas Bartlinski and Nicola (Kevin) Magley of Herndon, Billy Brady and Jimmy and Kevin Brady and two great-grandchildren, Justine and Bryce Heinen.

A Mass of Christian Burial was held at St. John Evangelist Church in Frederick on August 1.

Donations to Hospice of Frederick County would be welcomed.

In Memoriam – Matthew Hyland

Matthew Hyland died on July 30, 2014, at the age of 93. Known by his friends as Matt, he had come to Greenbelt about 10 years ago at the suggestion of Leonie Penney, a longtime friend. Matt's wife had died; she was Dutch, like Leonie, and the two families had been close in their younger years.

Matt lived in a house next to the woods, in the very last court of Laurel Hill Road. He loved being there and enjoyed the birds and the solitude. He was a lover of beauty of all kinds: art and music, flowers and animals. He was tall and handsome and had been an athlete in his youth.

During World War II, he trained at Pensacola as a pilot in the U.S. Navy, although he never saw service overseas. When he arrived in Greenbelt, he drove an old dark-blue Volvo station wagon, with cat and dog photos and peace signs plastered over the back windows.

At first Matt was very happy in his new Greenbelt life. He had two dogs; he took them with him everywhere in his Volvo and walked them twice a day. He was a wonderful photographer and went all over town with his camera, shooting photos of the flowering trees, the carnival, the ducks on the lake. He was polite and personable and made friends wherever he went. His neighbors loved him; one discussed flowers and plants with him; another served as his personal "vet" for the dogs; still another as his nurse when a medical problem arose. He was appreciative of everything anyone did for him; he often would make a drawing or write a poem, put it in an envelope and drop it at the door of someone who'd done him a favor. He once wrote an ode to a young woman checker at the Co-op.

But a few years ago, things began to change. The dogs died.

Some of his neighbors moved away. Matt's mental faculties began to fail and there were also physical problems. There were trips to the ER and nursing-home stays, then an incident which caused his son, who managed his affairs from Charlottesville, Va., to take away his car.

His friends, especially those from the Widowed Persons organization which Leonie had introduced him to, tried to help with rides and dinners; Greenbelt CARES was called to assist with medical issues. But eventually it became clear that Matt could not continue to live alone in the house.

For the past two years he resided at an assisted-living facility in Lanham. Only a week before his death, one of the men from the Widowed Persons group had brought him to their Friday-night gathering at Siri's Chef's Secret; Matt was quiet but polite and appreciative of the friendship as always.

Matt's body is being donated to science and there will be no funeral service. But those of us who knew him will remember his spirit and the effect that knowing him had on our lives. For several years, he was obsessed with making photocopies of Gauguin-like oil paintings he had created some years ago and giving them to his friends. I have several which I'll now treasure; one of the paintings was on display in the office of the Community Center.

He was also an author of stories for children. One of his works is called "The Magic Frisbee." I have a copy. The story is about kids who sail a frisbee to many countries to create peace in the world. He really wanted it published. Maybe I will try to accomplish that in his memory.

– Kathleen McFarland

His Greenbelt friends were saddened to learn that former Laurel Hill resident Matthew Hyland, 93, died at Prince George's hospital on July 30, 2014. Matt was well known to Co-op employees and others through his daily visits to the Center in his old Volvo station wagon.

Condolences to the family and friends of former Greenbelter Annette Brady, 89, of Frederick, Md., who died July 28, 2014. Sympathy especially to her daughter and son-in-law Kathleen and Wayne Smith of Greenbelt. The Bradys were original residents of the Lakewood community.

We were sorry to hear of the death of retired NASA scientist William (Bill) Muney on July 29, 2014, at the age of 80. Although his home was in Lanham, Bill socialized at the New Deal Café and the Co-op in his retirement years and was considered an honorary Greenbelter by his friends. A remembrance of his life will be held at the Café in the fall.

Best wishes to newlyweds Erika Thomas and Andrew Sandrus, who have moved to their new residence in Waldorf. Erika was a News Review staffer and a third-generation Greenbelter, the daughter of Jackie McFarland and Ronald Thomas and granddaughter of this reporter Kathleen and the late Henry McFarland.

Congratulations to Jonathan Valladares who represented Region 7 (Maryland, D.C., Delaware, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York and Quebec) for the second time at the Hershey National Track and Field Championship in Hershey, Pa. on August 2, 2014. Jonathan was the only athlete from Prince George's County to qualify for the National Championship. He was one of over 50 athletes representing Region 7. Jonathan placed third in the 100 meters boys 11-12. Jonathan's Greenbelt Boys and Girls Club track coach is Louis St. Felix. Jonathan is thankful for the support of his family, team, team parents and Coach Louis.

Send us your reports of new babies, awards, honors etc. to share with our readers. To send information for Our Neighbors, email us at newsreview@verizon.net or leave a message at 301-474-6892.

The Most Ignominious Defeat Took Place down the Road

by James Giese

Prince George’s County, in which Greenbelt is located, has few historical sites of significance. No battles were fought here in either the American Revolution or the Civil War.

Three significant sites represent dark days in American history. One is at the Mary Surratt House, a way-stop on John Wilkes Booth’s escape route following his assassination of Abraham Lincoln. Mary’s son John was a co-conspirator with Booth, and Mary was later hanged as one, although some historians doubt her guilt.

The other two significant sites are near the then small port town of Bladensburg on the Anacostia River. Bladensburg is just a few miles south of Greenbelt on the old Edmonston Road (now mostly replaced by Kenilworth Avenue, Md. 201).

Just across the District of Columbia boundary line on Bladensburg Road (US 1A) at what is now Fort Lincoln Cemetery, is a ravine, site of the infamous Bladensburg Dueling Grounds, where Washington City men of honor settled their differences with pistols at close range. Here War of 1812 naval hero Stephen Decatur was mortally wounded on March 22, 1820, by Commodore James Barron, who had been court-martialed and suspended from the Navy for five years following the loss of his ship to the British in 1807. Barron was then seeking reinstatement to command, in spite of Decatur’s objections.

The third site is between the dueling grounds and the Town of Bladensburg across the Anacostia River to the northeast. This is the site of the most ignominious defeat in the country’s history, the Battle of Bladensburg, which took place 200 years ago, August 24, 1814. The defeat then of American forces, almost a total rout, enabled British troops to occupy the city of Washington, burn the Capitol and eat President James Madison’s prepared dinner at the White House before burning it, as well.

Invasion

Five days earlier, the British invaded Prince George’s County without opposition, having landed infantrymen and marines at Benedict on the Patuxent River and crossing into this county near its southernmost point. After being at sea for four months, wearing heavy woolen uniforms and suffering from the extreme heat of a Maryland summer, the exhausted British troops moved slowly northward, spending the night at Aquasco and Nottingham.

The objective of the British expedition by land and sea was to capture the U.S. Navy’s flotilla of barges and gunboats located further upstream on the Patuxent River at Pig Point just east of Upper Marlboro. But on August 22 Commander Joshua Barney scuttled the fleet, blowing it up in view of the British. Taking his cannons with him, Barney and his men proceeded to the Washington Navy Yard and then on to Bladensburg.

Admiral Sir Alexander Cochrane, chief of British naval operations in North America, then ordered the return of his troops to the ships, fearing an ambush in an unfriendly land. Rear Admiral George Cockburn ignored the dispatch, however, and ordered the troops to move on to capture Washington.

On the American side, Secretary of War John Armstrong saw no reason for the British to attack Washington, a small city of 10,000 having no significant strategic or commercial value. Most of the American Army at the time was posted along the Canadian border to prevent a British invasion from there.

When an attack here became imminent, local militias were hastily rounded up to join a small contingent of Army forces and Barney’s men in the defense of Bladensburg.

British Army Major General Robert Ross, in charge of land operations, proceeded to Upper Marlboro and then east to Forestville, previously called Long Old Fields, on August 23. From there he could go straight to Washington, if the two bridges across the river were intact, or go to Bladensburg, where his troops could ford the Anacostia, if necessary. Meanwhile, American forces under the command of Brigadier General William Winder, an attorney by profession, camped nearby at the Woodyard Plantation.

Defense

On August 24, Ross, believing the bridges to Washington would be burned, marched his troops to Bladensburg, while Winder took his force across the bridges into Washington and then marched north to join the troops already at Bladensburg. Brigadier General Tobias Stanbury brought troops from Baltimore to occupy Lowndes Hill overlooking the town on the east. (The roads from Annapolis, now Md. 450, and Upper Marlboro went over the hill into town.) Although the hill and buildings within the town would best serve the American defense, Stansbury withdrew across the river to join other troops after being told that the bridge was to be burned, thereby cutting off his avenue of retreat from the hill.

Americans took up positions of defense between the river and the District line in what are now the towns of Cottage City and Colmar Manor. Madison and Armstrong, who were there with other members of the cabinet including Secretary of State James Monroe, repositioned the hastily formed lines, adding to the confusion. A large gap was left in the middle of the line.

The Battle

The British arrived, meeting little resistance on the hill or in town and began firing their new weapon, Congreve rockets, at the defenders. Some units forded the river and others attacked and crossed the still-standing bridge, the American artillery being set too far back to effectively defend it.

While some American forces valiantly held their ground, particularly Barney and his sailors, who positioned themselves on the Washington Pike, the rockets and disorganized positions forced Winder to call an organized retreat, which quickly turned into a rout.

Monroe and his cabinet fled to Montgomery County. Later, Monroe detractors would write the second most famous poem of the war, referring to the battle as “the Bladensburg Races.”

Although the British were the victors, they suffered most of the casualties. And even more died from heat stroke.

The British spent one day in Washington, burning mostly public buildings and doing little looting or harm to residents. Fearing vulnerability from being surrounded by hostile Americans, Ross ordered the troops back to the ships at Benedict, returning by way of the Marlboro Pike (now Landover Road, Md. 202). There was considerable looting along the way by foraging parties, stragglers and deserters, according to the Wikipedia article on the battle.

In Greenbelt

The area which is now the City of Greenbelt consisted of small farms at that time. The battle was far enough distant that those here at the time would not have seen any part of it. Those living here would also not have seen “the rockets red glare” because it was daylight but could have heard the “bombs bursting in air” and the cannon fire. Foraging parties probably did not come this far north. However some of the younger men of the Turner, Hamilton and Walker families who did live here at the time might have participated in the battle as members of the defending militia.

Dr. Beanes

At Upper Marlboro, townsmen captured some stray Brits and jailed them. When Major General Ross arrived, he was furious.

He arrested Dr. William Beanes and two others, threatening to burn the town if the captives were not returned. Beanes had earlier been forced to entertain Cockburn and Ross overnight at his home. When the captives were released, the other two men were released but Ross retained Beanes.

Montgomery County lawyer and defender, Francis Scott Key, was sent as an emissary to free Beanes but the two men became too knowledgeable of British plans to attack Baltimore and were held aboard ship, where they watched the British attempt to capture the city on September 13. The American success in defending the city restored the national pride that had been severely damaged by its loss at Bladensburg. And Key wrote a poem about the battle, which, as everyone knows, became the U.S. national anthem.

While maybe not the best thing to celebrate, the Town of Bladensburg and Prince George’s County will be celebrating the 200th Anniversary of the battle with the dedication of a commemoration monument, a reenactment, festival, an art fair and even the Bladensburg Races, a 5 km run (see box). Even more festive will be the celebrations planned for Baltimore, where two hundred years ago, the victory belonged to the United States.

Doctors Hospital Sponsors Market, New Fitness Center

Doctors Community Hospital continues to invest in the surrounding community through sponsorship of the Greenbelt Farmers Market and by launching a new employee fitness center. Both are focused on improving the health and well-being of people who live and work in Prince George's County.

In July Doctors Community Hospital became a sponsor of the Greenbelt Farmers Market to support efforts to encourage residents to make healthier food choices while receiving free preventative health information.

The farmers market is held on Sundays through November from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the parking lot behind Roosevelt Center in Historic Greenbelt. Market goers can visit the hospital's booth there the last Sunday of each month through October.

Employee Fitness

The hospital has furthered its focus on investing in the health of the community by developing a new employee fitness center. Paul Hagens, vice president of the hospital's Human Resources Department, stated, "A large number of our employees not only work in this community, they also live here. In fact, of our 1,452 employees, about 816 or 56 percent reside right here in Prince George's County. So, our commitment to investing in the community logically includes ensuring that our employees also have access to tools that help them reach or maintain their health goals."

Opened on August 1, the fitness center is free to all employees and accessible seven days a week. Located on the hospital's main campus, the center has treadmills, recumbent bikes, spinner bikes, a cross trainer, dumbbells and an elliptical. There also are areas designated for aerobic classes and a changing room.

Democratic Club Plans Usual Active August

by Konrad Herling

Come join the Eleanor & Franklin Roosevelt Democratic Club on Friday, August 15 at 6:35 p.m. at Prince George’s Stadium in Bowie to enjoy some minor league baseball. The Orioles AA minor league team, the Bowie Baysox, will play host to the New York Yankees AA team, the Trenton Thunder.

If you think this is just another minor league game, remember that you may have a chance to see a future major league ballplayer. Two years ago club members saw Manny Machado play for the Bowie Baysox. Now Machado is perhaps the best fielding third baseman in the majors.

In short, the game offers a rare opportunity to have fun at the ballpark, take the kids to various carnival rides, enjoy being with friends you’ve known forever and meet new friends. Keep in mind, baseball is a sport that attracts folks with different political perspectives; a baseball game might be the perfect venue for folks with a different viewpoint.

For example, George Will, the well-known conservative columnist, and the late Senator George McGovern, whose father played minor league baseball, went to a number of major league games together. Will, who has been a member of the Orioles’ Board of Directors, wrote Men at Work, a beautiful piece about the joy and toil of baseball. McGovern’s father played second base for a minor league team. At least for a few hours they shared a passion for the national pastime. Maybe more members of Congress should attend baseball games together.

In any event, the Eleanor and Franklin Roosevelt Democratic Club is growing again. Over 100 area residents are now members of a club with a rich history, founded in the late 1970s. Often councilmembers from the Greenbelt area, county council members and state representatives such as State Senator Paul Pinsky and our county delegates Tawana Gaines, Anne Healey and Alonzo Washington come to enjoy the refreshments and company. Come join the fun on August 15 and consider joining the club. For more information about this and other club events, call 301-220-1025.

Labor Day Recycling Training Program

Public Works provides both trash and recycling bins, placed in sets side by side for Labor Day Festival goers to use. Volunteers are needed to encourage people to put their refuse in the correct bin mainly by standing near the bins. Volunteers will wear a Greenbelt Public Works sticker, a little green turtle or frog pendant and maybe other green attire. Join the fun with some Circus Kids doing skits and some people making announcements – help is needed in all these areas. A training session will be held on Thursday, August 14 at the Public Works building at 7 p.m.

Recycle these: Paper and plastic plates, paper and plastic cups and bottles, foil (ball it up), pizza boxes, any metal (e.g. cans), glass bottles and plastic bags bundled and tied together in one bag.

Trash these: food, liquids, napkins and paper towels, even if clean, styrofoam (banned at the festival but may come from outside), plastic clamshell containers, straws, lids, potato chip bags and other mylar.

The organizers will verify community service hours and/or provide a recommendation as appropriate for students or any other volunteer. Mainly students are expected as volunteers but adult help is also appreciated.

For more information, contact Luisa Robles, Greenbelt Sustainability Coordinator at lrobles@greenbeltmd.gov. or 240-542-2153.

An aerial view of the proposed FBI facility shows the breadth of the project.

Concept Plans Take Shape For Proposed FBI Facility

by James Giese

Renard Development Company, LLC/Gensler is the developer seeking to develop the WMATA-owned Greenbelt Metro Station property as a mixed use development with much of the existing land being designated for the site of a new campus headquarters facility for the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI). The Greenbelt site is one of three on a short list being considered by the FBI and General Services Administration for the new headquarters.

The developers have provided the News Review with two renderings depicting how the site might look once developed. Since site selection will be a lengthy process, there will be many hurdles to cross before a final site design is determined and final plans could be significantly different.

Aerial View

The connector road between the South Core of Greenbelt Station and the North Core (this site), now called Greenbelt Station Parkway, separates the FBI HQ (foreground) from a row of apartments, offices, an hotel, shops and Metro parking. To the left on the Parkway is the South Core and access to Greenbelt Road. To the right are the access ramps to the Capital Beltway including new on- and off-ramps for traffic to and from the east (the new on-ramp is barely visible to the right of the last building).

This rendering proposes 5 office buildings on the FBI campus, each 16 or so stories in height. The other two low, flat buildings are parking garages, the one to the right covered with solar panels. A fleet maintenance facility is attached to a garage. Access to the campus would be through gates at the north and south ends of the property and a pedestrian walkway from the Metro Station at a plaza proposed across the Parkway from the two FBI buildings on the left. The north gate (right) would provide access to Greenbelt Metro Drive, which connects to Cherrywood Lane in Greenbelt West.

The row of buildings along the west side of the Parkway and the east side of the Metro and CSX tracks would not be a part of the headquarters. From left to right, they would be a Metro parking garage, a 500-unit apartment building, a 300-key hotel and three office buildings. A 300-unit apartment building is not shown and would be off the rendering to the left of the Metro parking garage. Behind and under these buildings would be the Metro access road from the Beltway ramps. Metro Kiss and Ride parking would be under the apartment building. At the south end (left), the access road would connect to Greenbelt Station Parkway, which would return exiting traffic to the Beltway and to an entrance gate for the FBI HQ.

Plaza Rendering

This is a view looking to the east from the Metro Station area towards the FBI HQ across Greenbelt Station Parkway. To the right is the 500-unit apartment building. To the left is the 300-key hotel. Shops and restaurants would face the plaza. The pedestrian entrance to the FBI HQ would be under the elevated Parkway. A publicly accessible FBI museum would be located at the entrance. The two FBI buildings shown in the back are connected with some kind of an architectural bridge near their tops and by a low building with a small, taller cube building at their base.
